ClipCopy is a Far Manager plugin that allows you to copy files and folders using the clipboard. Give it a try and see how it handles itself! ...Q: Why does a translucent PNG disappear upon rotating device? I am loading an image into my unity game, using the following method: Upon attempting to rotate the device, I have noticed the image disappears. The image (a sprite) loads perfectly when the device is at the default orientation, but fails to load when rotating. I have tried a couple of alternatives, such as the following: My code currently looks like: public static Texture2D LoadTexture(string textureFile) { byte[] texture = File.ReadAllBytes(textureFile); UnityEngine.Texture2D tex; tex = new UnityEngine.Texture2D(2, 2); tex.LoadImage(texture); tex.name = textureFile; tex.wrapMode = UnityEngine.TextureWrapMode.Repeat; tex.hideFlags = HideFlags.HideAndDontSave; return tex; } My current parameters for the loading looks like: tex.name = "sheet" tex.pixelWidth = 608 tex.pixelHeight = 380 tex.magFilter = UnityEngine.TextureMagFilter.Linear; tex.mipFilter = UnityEngine.TextureMipFilter.Linear; tex.anisoLevel = 2; EDIT: I have changed the method to use DDSLoader as @Ricardo mentioned. I used his code to test if my textures were loading, and they did indeed load. I then implemented the method below (copied from here) to load my texture and it failed to load correctly.

What's New In ClipCopy?

ClipCopy is a simple far manager plugin that allows copying of files and folders from one Far Manager instance to another. It is not a universal proxy or middleman to pass a single request through. It works one on one pair wise, so if it does not work for you, see the readme how to fix it. It uses the clipboard to store the file/folder in question and uses a temp file or creates a new, unique temp file. Features: - Filename Support - Path Support - Move to Clipboard, Paste from Clipboard - Working for folders and files - A far manager instance is not required to use ClipCopy - High Temp file usage Download: Enjoy and let me know your thoughts on the ClipCopy plugin! While working on the 3d-viewer team at Tricaster, one of our leading software authors came to me with the following problem: His main application, which uses a delphi XE2 VCL application, has a delay when transferring large images. This is often caused by copy/paste being slow. Also, a lot of resources are consumed at the client computer while executing the copy/paste operation. To optimize this, the client application was encapsulated with a native dll. When the dll was installed, in the registry, the user got a "click here to install this file" dialog. The default values were: HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\SOFTWARE\Classes\Installer\InstallSource"= Install" This was triggered on the installation of the dll. In the Far Manager settings we have the "Site" and "InstallSource" parameter and we can put an URL there: This will give the user a much better user experience and we didn't have to change the registry. The urls can be customized as the user does not see that information. So, when the user clicks on "ok" a normal dialog is opened for the "classic install" option. This enables the user to choose the install source. We would like to change this to be a "normal" Far Manager install. It will
