1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a process for producing a semiconductor device, and more particularly to a process for producing a semiconductor device, in which a surface of a polycrystalline semiconductor film which is formed on a substrate and is a source or a drain of a thin film transistor is planarized by forming a silicon oxide film (referred to as an SiO₂ film) as an insulating film between the substrate and the polycrystalline semiconductor film and annealing the substrate in an oxidizing atmosphere.

2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, semiconductor devices are remarkably developed and a number of researches are in progress for the use of a thin film transistor (hereinafter referred to as a TFT) as a switching element of a matrix type display or the like. A glass substrate made of such a material as a quartz glass or the like has been mainly used as a substrate for a semiconductor device. In recent years, however, a demand for TFTs for driving an active matrix type liquid crystal display device or the like is remarkably increased. Therefore, a substrate made of a light-transmitting material such as a glass, a plastic or the like is required to be used as
